Combination of Curative Waters. It is truly wonderful that nature should lavish upon any one point so many valuable healing waters as are found at Variety Springs, and yet no one has taken any pains to inform the public at large of the unequalled benefits offered to the sick and suffering at these Springs. We have for years witnessed the improved health and heard the most enthusiastic descriptions from our friends as to the strange efficacy, and variety of its waters; and we have invariably recommended them to those whose health required tonic or alterative treatment. We desire to submit to our readers some facts in regard to these Springs, which will exhibit them in their true light.

About 15 miles West of Staunton there is an unpretending group of Cabins nestling quietly near the summit of mountains whose lengthened shadows seem intent upon hiding the dwellers below away from the gaze and glare of the busy world. But for the morning and evening visits of the Rail Road Trains, one might imagine himself shut out from all connection with the restless, anxious world, whose noisy surges break and die away but a few miles distant .floor and crowding haylofts and barns in order to obtain access to the numerous Springs, that bubble from the base of almost every hillside. tound; chalybeate, healing, sulphur and three | ton city, D. C. distinct varieties of alum; also a spring of de-lightful free stone for those who desire simply to enjoy the exhiliarating atmosphere of the STORE, No. 171, King street, will be rented to distinct varieties of alum; also a spring of demountains without using any medicinal waters. These attractions are located on the highest range of mountains in the State, and are greatly enhanced by an atmosphere of the greatest purity, the coolest because it is the rarest, and breezes from the mountain gorges opening above and below this seeluded retreat. Within a lew miles and towering in awful sublimity towards heaven stands the loftiest peak in the State, known as Elliott's Knob, 337 feet higher than the Peaks of Otter. From this commanding point the splendors of the rising and setting sun and the interminable scope of varied and romantic scenery beggar all description .-It is worth a long pilgrimage to witness such an unrivalled panorama of nature's many featured beauties and surpassing grandeurs.

and the variety and efficacy of their waters have not attracted the attention of capitalists is a acquainted with these Springs, acknowledges new ones of equal power. that in the hands of the proper parties, these Springs must become one of the most attractive and popular resorts in the mountains. We learn that the present owners are now willing to sell; being too old to meet the pressing and increasing demands of their patrons, and not having the capital to make such improvements as the growing reputation of the place now demands. Impoverished as our people are in the surrounding county from which its patronage has heretofore mainly been drawn—yet there have not been less than one thousand visitors on different occasions on the ground during the present season. Before the war, receipts from the sale of the waters alone paid all the expenses of the family, and those who have sold these waters say that they are preferred by their customers to those of any Springs in the mountains. Some of our personal acquaintances have experienced truly wonderful benefits from the use of these waters, and Prof. Gillam says, in his analysis of them, that their essential ingredients and proportions make a comparison between them and the Rockbridge Alum very tavorable to the Variety. The Sulphur Water which is furnished here to visitors, is from the Crawford Springs, and is by many preferred to the White Sulphur, and by all pronounced as pond with me. nearly like them as any in the State. The healing waters have cured some of the most virulent forms of cutaneous and scrofulous diseases on record. The chalybeate spring is the SUMAC. coolest and most delightful in the mountains. Indeed all the Springs at this place have a strong infusion of iron. If, however, parties should desire simply to enjoy the cooling and exhilirating influence of an elevated mountain retreat, without using any medicinal waters, there is a bold spring of Freestone water accessible to all, so that, except where the "rotating passion" has seized the spring goer, there is no necessity for seekers of health to "change their base" during the season, as all the different waters are here supplied without the expense and fatigue of going the rounds of the Springs .-Staunton Spectator.

'What will you take?' said the woman. 'Oh, noth ing more,' was the reply. 'I have but forty sous, and I must buy some charcoal to stifle myself with. 'Oh, that's very foolish,' rejoined the landlady, who thought he was joking; with two-pennyworth of cord you could hang yourself, and by that arrangement you would have some more money to spend in drink?
